GUADALAJARA

Guadalajara, Mexico – Páramo and kurimanzutto present the exhibition Interrogatorio Inverso [Inverse Interrogation], by Miguel Calderón.

Interrogatorio Inverso is a group of works in which Calderón explores themes such as the free association of images, perception, the workings of memory, and the mass production and dissemination of news images. The artist combines these issues with his characteristic way of creating narratives based on his encounters with real persons who have undergone extreme experiences.

The central piece of the exhibition is an interview with the former director of Interpol Mexico, in which he narrates some of the most outstanding cases of his career. His eloquent language, humor and physical presence create a sense of being in front of a character from a police novel that is constantly confronted by existential questions. On a parallel screen, Calderón adds footage extracted from various news archives that are part of the collective unconscious and that are linked to the events described during the interview.

The exhibition includes other pieces associated with the idea of images multiplied through communications media.

Interrogatorio Inverso is the fourth show of the program entitled Impasse 2019-2020, a project by Daniel Guzmán. Impasse is designed to reactivate and strengthen ties with the local contemporary art scene through a selection of artists, both Mexican and foreign, who have made their careers in Mexico.

About the artist

Miguel Calderón (Mexico City, 1971) explores a broad range of themes, from violence and corruption in Mexico, to youth and family dynamics, to the supernatural. However, his work is unified by an ever-present sense of theatricality, questioning the fine line between reality and fiction. Frequently cast from the perspective of an outsider, he highlights the macabre complexity of man's position in the universe deftly weaving together mockery, foolishness, social critique and sincerity of emotion. He creates works from a mashup of vernacular references, employing a variety of media, including video, photography, sculpture and painting.

For Calderón, it is important that art be accessible; he came of age as an artist in Mexico during the 1990s, when he was a key figure in the development of a young alternative art scene in Mexico.

Calderón received his BFA from the San Francisco Art Institute in 1994. He has been the recipient of the Cisneros Fontanals Art Foundation Grant & Commissions program (2013), The MacArthur Fellowship for Film and New Media (2000), and the Bancomer/Rockefeller Fellowship (1995).
